Charter Revoked.

Formal notice that the charter of the Central Labor Union, of Washington, had been revoked, and that the organization was expelled from the American Federation of Labor, was given yesterday by telegraph. The telegram was signed by President Samuel Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, and was dated at Denver, Colo., where the members of the executive council of the American Federation made a stop on their way to the San Francisco convention. The telegram received reads:

"Your central body failed to comply with executive council's directions as decided by Boston convention, and contained in my letter of September 28. Time limit having expired, your charter stands revoked. Executive council has further decided charter will be restored upon compliance of your central body with decision."

To comply with the instructions of the executive council the Central Labor Union will be compelled to expel from membership the local unions of steamfitters, which action was demanded of the union by President Gompers last month. He wrote the union that unless the steamfitters' local union merged itself by November 1 with the United Association of Plumbers, Gasfitters, Steamfitters, and Steamfitters' Helpers, or was expelled from the Central Labor Union, the charter of the latter would be revoked.

The steamfitters' union is a member of the Central Labor Union, whereas the plumbers' union is not. The executive committee of the central body was authorized to write a letter to Mr. Gompers. The letter was drafted and approved and sent to the president of the American Federation of Labor. Its contents were not made public, but it is understood that an extension of time beyond November 1 for action in the matter was asked for.

Similar action was taken at Denver yesterday in the cases of the Central Labor organizations of St. Louis, Indianapolis, Chicago, and Boston, which have broken the same law overridden in Washington.

Hornets Adjourned Meeting.

The Dexter Literary and Psychic Research Society of Germantown, Pa., held the shortest, and at the same time the liveliest meeting in its history last night. The subject under discussion was natural history, and the members had been requested to bring various specimens with them to illustrate whatever information they might care to dispense for the benefit of their fellow-mortals. Henry Johnson brought an aquarium containing various fish that he had taken from the Wisahickon creek. Mrs. Harriet Stannard arrived late, but bearing triumphantly a huge hornets' nest, which she said her little brother Willie had found in Fisher's woods while napping. In response to exclamations of alarm from several of the more timid women present, she assured everyone that the nest had been abandoned by the hornets that had made it, and that it was "perfectly harmless." Mrs. Stannard placed the nest on a windowsill over a steam radiator while she removed her hat and coat. Contact with the heat caused the hornets to get busy, and soon a hornet alighted upon a speaker's nose and created such an "impression" upon her that she fled, screaming a swarm of hornets poured out of the "abandoned" nest kindly contributed to the discussion by Mrs. Stannard, and the meeting adjourned without formality.

Fleeing from Russia.

With the arrival of the North German Lloyd steamer Breslau at Baltimore comes another story of the wholesale destruction of the Russians by the Japanese in the war in the far East and the sudden departure of the Czar's young men to other countries. The war, according to some who arrived on the vessel, has caused indescribable fear to spread over the entire Russian Empire, and hundreds are leaving their homes to save their lives every day. There were 800 Russians of in the steamer of the Breslau, and those who landed at Baltimore told horrible stories of the slaughter and emphasized the fact that the war is far from drawing to a close. One young man said that the government had no mercy on those old enough to go to the front, and even those who show plainly that they are in physical distress are forced to join the ranks and are hustled off to the battlefields that are stained with the blood of thousands who have already been slain. "It is a hopeless case," continued the Russian, "and my government, from the manner in which the armies have been conducted, might as well quit fighting and accede to the Japs." The steamer arrived at New York a few days ago, and the greater number of the Russians landed at the metropolis. They all declared that they would never return to their native land.

Poverty Drives Girl to Suicide.

Miss Emma Probst, an attractive-looking girl, 18 years old, applied at the Allen & Ginter branch of the American Tobacco Company's Works in Richmond for employment and then went to Forest Hill Park yesterday and drowned herself in the lake there. The body was seen floating by two women, and taken out by Special Officer Overton. The girl was poorly but neatly dressed, and on the bank near by was her hat, her cloak, nicely folded, her gold-rimmed eyeglasses and her pocketbook, containing $1.01. In the pocketbook was a card bearing her name and address—Emma Probst, 101 Couts street. She was a blonde, of medium size and lived with her mother and sister at the above address. She formerly worked at the Randolph paper box factory, and at one time was a book agent. She had a card in her pocket signifying that she had secured employment at the Allen & Ginter factory at $3 a week, and was instructed to report next Monday. Poverty is the supposed cause of her suicide. She and her mother and sister have had a hard time in making a living. The girl told a woman a few days ago that she owed a good deal of money and that she was thinking of ending all her troubles by suicide.
